

Dear Eve,

I understand how you feel right now. You are angry with me because of my decision to return to my Father. You feel abandoned and even betrayed. These are feelings I cannot erase as long as you do not accept reality. But if you think back, we cannot change the past nor our past decisions. Equally, we cannot escape the consequences of our decisions. No one forced you to agree with the Serpent and act accordingly. In the same way, no one forced me to agree with you and betray my Father. That was my decision and I was made to suffer the consequence of my decision. The sad part is that I dragged you and my children into suffering from my mistake. They were all born in my prison. I am truly ashamed of this.

On a positive note, any one of my children could have learned from my mistake, repent and return to my Father as I was not willing to do. The good news is that this did in fact take place. One of my progeny dared to confront the cloudiness and repent of my sin of betrayal. And by effectuating this reconciliation, this man was given the place as "firstborn" which I had forsaken. Now he is the head of the Heavenly Family of God in Eden, not me. I am the first flesh son of God, yes, but I gave up my place as first heavenly son of God by choosing to listen to you, Eve, rather than to my Father. But as I was invited to do in the beginning, I am so doing now: better late than never.

*With genuine love for you and the children,
Adam*
