

Eve,

If you remember, when you offered me the Forbidden Fruit, I chose to eat it. You did not force me to eat it. You influenced me with your arguments. But in the end, I chose to eat it. It was my choice and I am responsible for this choice. This made my Father sad. But when He confronted me and gave me the opportunity to repent, He became very angry when I blamed you. Instead of taking responsibility for my action, I blamed you. Why should I have blamed you? He never told you about the Forbidden Tree. He only told me. He made His covenant with me and not with you. He made me responsible to Him, and not you. He gave you to me and I was responsible for you. When I blamed you, this was irresponsible, cowardly and selfish of me. I should never have blamed you for my decision and action. I could have resisted you and not eaten the Forbidden Fruit. I could have chosen to remain faithful to my Father. But as you have seen, we have all suffered. I deserved to be punished.

Also, I should never have been angry at Him for punishing me. In my pride, I remained angry at Him because I thought and believed Him to be unreasonable and unfair. But after all of this time, I was given the opportunity to learn His point of view. Tell the children that we should stop blaming each other. Now we should take responsibility for our respective decisions and actions. Now we can receive forgiveness. Reconciliation is now available. But it can only take place in the Way that my Father instructs me. Come.

*Your Designated Shepherd,
Adam*
