

O God, my children do not listen to me. You have already begun to chastise them. If they were to heed Your voice and learn, You would release them of their painful chastisement. Do you not have the power or the desire to open their minds, Father? Would it not be a good thing? Would it not be a beautiful thing to see my children listen and repent and return to You, o God, my Father? Nevertheless, not according to my wisdom but rather according to Yours, o God, my Father. You have said, "Those whom I love I chasten". I understand and accept this. Whatever You decide, I am in agreement with You, even if I am in grief to see my family suffer at Your hand. For Yours are the Kingdom, the Power, and the Recognition.

*Your Son,
Adam*
